

SB0059 Testimony12 January 2011*Patty Dean*Helena, MT

Good afternoon Mr. Chairman & members of the committee. I'm Patty Dean [spell name], a Partner in the Field for the National Trust for Historic Preservation but today I am testifying as a public historian based upon more than 30 years' experience in museums in Montana, Arkansas & Minnesota.

I offer my whole-hearted support of SB0059 "to provide for a mural that honors the history of Montana women as community builders". I am keenly attuned to the vital need to study & make accessible to the public, the presence & stories of people who--because of gender, religion, or ethnicity--have long been "under the level of historical scrutiny."

Our understanding of Montana history is always evolving. In recent years, as historians & genealogists have interviewed their communities' women for family & local histories & sought out club & business records, diaries & journals for archives & library collections, new stories have emerged that further illuminate the Montana history we thought we knew.

In the excellent history, Montana's State Capitol: The People's House published by the Montana Historical Society Press in 2002, Professor Patricia M. Burnham recounts how the selection of images made 100 years ago to tell Montana's short Euro-American history in pictorial form reflected an understanding of our state's history at that time. In the very early 20th century, women's legacy as community builders in Montana history was not understood nor consequently valued. As we are learning to seek out other Montanans' newly-told stories, it is critical that we ensure that the People's House more fully portrays the people's story. Presently, this story is incomplete, characters, plots, & themes are missing. The creation & placement of a mural in the Capitol documenting how women have enriched every aspect of our culture would fill this void eloquently.

I'd like to close with a brief quote from the afterword of Motherlode, an anthology compiled & edited by Butte historians Ellen Crain & Janet Finn on the legacy of women's lives & labors in the Mining City:

"With courage, grace & humor women have built & sustained community in good times & bad. They have persevered for the sake of individual, family & community survival & they have taught us the value of commitment for the long haul... Women have made the connection between personal struggles & public issues & between acts of love & acts of justice. They have stepped forward to serve their community & challenge those who would seek to silence them or render them invisible... In so doing, they have inspired future generations to take a risk, envision possibilities & make a difference. We are grateful for the opportunity to bear witness to these stories & to make them part of the public record."

We are all here today, you & I, to make a difference, that is only one of our links to these Montanans so deserving of recognition & commemoration. I urge you to pass SB0059 to ensure their legacy is rendered visible in the Capitol's visual public record. Thank you for your consideration.
